

AN EVERYDAY EVENT.

I've a letter in my pocket
That I would not, could not show,
For its dainty superscription
Was indeed long ago.
And the dimpled hand that penned it
Was a hand I used to hold
When we spooned around the shadows
Of the summer days of old.

She became my wife soon after,
And, upon our wedding day,
Handed me a little letter,
Saying: "Put it away."
So I put it in my pocket
With a vow to mail it soon;
But I had much to remember
On that busy day in June.
And to-day my clothing-cleaner,
With an air of mystery,
Brought a package to my office
To be opened secretly.
He is married. In the package,
Solid and marred with crease and blot,
Was its dainty superscription,
Which I still I forgot.

AT ARM'S LENGTH.

"Here's another letter, Ellen, from that wretched cousin of mine," said Rev. Horace Bernard, looking up from his breakfast with an air of utter disgust. "It's the same old story, I suppose, gambling and drinking. I fear no power on earth can save him."

His gentle little wife made no answer, but looked as if she were thinking deeply.

"When I first knew him," he continued, "he was as handsome and bright a young fellow as one could wish to see, a really promising artist; now, Ellen, I solemnly assure you, it makes me ill to look at him. Pah, he scarcely takes the trouble to dress himself decently." Mr. Bernard was somewhat fastidious.

"I suppose he is dreadfully poor," murmured his wife pitifully.

"Poor! Yes, and he deserves to be poor. I have no patience with him, Ellen. Look at that—he tossed the letter across the table—he expects me to go to him at any time of the day or night that he chooses to send."

"But, Horace, he says he is ill," "I dare say he is; I can readily believe it; but I have my sermon to prepare, and I must attend to that, whatever is left undone. Well, Well, don't you agree with me?" Rev. Horace spoke rather sharply, as if he read dissent in her face.

"If he is so very bad, Horace, perhaps—

"Oh, he'll pull through, Ellen. Don't worry about him. I'll go this evening, but he will have to wait till then. It is of no use, I cannot preach without taking time to prepare."

So saying, he pushed back his chair, and retired to his study. He was a nervous, excitable man, and the letter had irritated him. All day long the thought of his nee-do-well cousin seemed to be in his mind. His thoughts ran on him instead of on the grand text on which he wished to fasten his attention:

"God is love, and he that dwelleth in love, dwelleth in God, and God in him."

His ideas on this occasion were rambling and incoherent; and though he worked all day and made more than one beginning, his sermon was a failure; and there was nothing to be done but to tear up his notes and make an entirely fresh attempt on the morrow.

"Well, Ellen," he said, with an air of grim determination, "I suppose now I shall have to set off to the other end of the town to see what is the matter with that fellow. His wretched letter has spoiled my day's work. He is a worthless scamp, if ever there was one."

He was still in the same martyr spirit of severe endurance when he reached the shabby house that sheltered his disreputable cousin. As he looked around the forlorn room, and at its still more forlorn occupant, who was tossing on a miserable bed opposite the uncurtained window, he felt that it was very hard that a member of his own family should be so utterly lost to all sense of what was right and fitting.

"I am very sorry to trouble you, Horace," muttered the sick man (Mr. Bernard made an impatient gesture at the familiar address), "but if I can't get a few dollars from somewhere I shall be turned into the street. If I had only been well I could have finished that to-day." He pointed to a picture on a little easel by the window.

Mr. Bernard slowly unbuttoned his coat, and drew out his pocket-book, asking: "What do you need besides the rent?"

"I need nothing; neither food nor medicine."

"You should be ashamed of yourself, Martin. You ought not to need help again."

Martin made no reply; nor did he listen to the warnings and exhortations which accompanied the gift he had requested. He had heard them all before, and he consoled himself under the misfortune of having to endure them again by the reflection that preaching was his cousin's business. Unhappily, Horace Bernard's curt, contemptuous manner towards him confirmed this impression; yet he was not only depressed and humbled, but had a most sincere desire to do his duty, and to benefit those with whom he came in contact. Now, though he could ill spare the time to linger in Martin's squally lodging, he considered indignation and convenience, hoping against hope to be of some real service to the man, beyond and above supplying his bodily needs. Alas, his well-meant words were worse than useless, for even his attitude, as he stood stiff and unbending in the center of the room, spoke loudly of the disgust he felt. Had not Martin learned to hide his feelings, and to humble himself in his misfortunes, he would have ordered his visitor out of the place. As it was, he endured his presence in silence.

"Nothing I can say affects him," lamented Mr. Bernard when he reached home. "I do believe he has not a spark of gratitude in his composition."

"What is the matter with him, Horace?"

"I am afraid I didn't ask," he answered, a little penitently. "He looked ill, I noticed; but he ruined his health years ago. It is his own fault, you see, Ellen. I have been helping him, off and on, for more than ten years. The worst of it is, one never knows whether one is not doing him more harm than good."

All night the thought of the wretched man, alone and perhaps dying, in his miserable room haunted Mrs. Bernard. She could not sleep for thinking of him, and soon after breakfast she set out to see for herself what ailed him. It was long past noon when she returned. She went at once to her husband's study.

"Horace," she began, "I have been to see him, and I am sure that without proper care he will die."

"Who will die?" demanded the minister, absently, for he was still engaged on the long deferred task of composing his sermon.

"I am afraid," said Mrs. Bernard, she answered, looking earnestly into his face, "let me bring him home!"

"Bring him here!" The tone expressed displeasure as strongly as surprise. "You don't know what kind a man he is!"

"He never told me anything. Even last night I could not get a word out of him."

"He has sinned dreadfully, Horace, but he has suffered, too. Do let me nurse him! People have been very hard and cruel to him; he has hardly had a chance to become different."

"Hardly a chance? I am sure, Ellen, I have done what I could. I have given him money over and over again that I needed for other things."

"Yes, yes, I know that you have helped him, dear, but what he needs is a little kindness." Mrs. Bernard spoke impulsively, and was quite innocent of any ironical intention. "If he dies, then, and as he is, we shall never forgive ourselves, and he is your own cousin, too."

Mr. Bernard did not want to do this thing, but as a Christian man he dared not hastily refuse. He wished his wife had left Martin to him; why should she want to bring the broken-down scamp into the very house? He knew that she was still looking at him with those earnest, tender eyes, and to escape their scrutiny he began to read over the notes he had been writing. He had taken a new text: "Lord, if thou wilt Thou canst make me clean," and this text he read, only one short sentence: "The man was a leper, loathsome and unclean; but Jesus did not turn away; He touched and healed him." Whatever he had meant when he wrote the words, they now held both a lesson and a condemnation for him.

"Ellen," he said, "do what you wish. All these years I am afraid I have been trying to save people at arm's length. No wonder I have failed."

"I don't think you have failed, Horace," she said, in a tone of surprise.

"I'm afraid I have, Ellen. I can write and preach and talk of love, but I don't possess it. God help me and make me different."

Before night Martin was established in the cozy room in the house, but for weeks he was too ill to notice the change from his old to his new quarters. He had been nursed him with untiring care, and she had an ample reward, for when he at last rose from his bed of sickness he had come to his right mind, and was ready to make the prodigious confession, and to receive the prodigious welcome home. In spite of himself his cousin watched his struggle upwards with many misgivings. His mother's growth into years, Martin still patiently wrestled with his manifold temptations, and Horace Bernard no longer doubted that the great love of the Master and the little love of His disciple had won a glorious victory. He had learned at last, with shame and sorrow at his own obstinate blindness, the open secret of the mightiest power on earth; and he could now teach others that dwelt in love, dwell in God, and God in him—"Emly Weaver, in N. Y. Observer."

When You Take Your Vacation.

The most necessary article to have with you (after your pocket book) is a bottle of Foley's Colic and Diarrhoea Cure. It is an absolute prevention of or cure of all derangements of the bowels caused by a change of water. You are likely to need it. For sale by C. K. Wily.

Cholera is still raging in Fayoum province and elsewhere in Egypt.

NOTICE.

I want every man and woman in the United States to have one of my books on these diseases. Address B. K. Woolley, Atlanta, Ga., Box 50, and one will be sent you free.

Queen Victoria will pay all the expenses of Li Hing Chung's visit to England.

Last summer one of our grand children was sick with a severe bowel trouble. Our doctors' remedy failed, then we tried Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy which gave very speedy relief. We regard it as the best medicine ever put on the market for bowel complaints.—Mrs. E. G. Gregory, Fredericktown, Mo. This certainly is the best medicine ever put on the market for dysentery, summer complaint, colic and cholera infantum in children. It never fails to give prompt relief when used in reasonable time and the plain printed directions are followed. Many mothers have expressed their sincere gratitude for the cure it has effected. For sale by R. C. Hardwick, druggist.

A Savannah negro stole 50 water-melons in one day. He holds the record.

DISEASES OF THE SKIN.

The intense itching and smarting incident to eczema, nettle, salt-rheum, and other diseases of the skin is instantly allayed by applying Chamberlain's Eye and Skin Ointment. Many very bad cases have been permanently cured by it. It is equally efficient for itching piles and a favorite remedy for sore nipples, chapped hands, chilblains, frost bites, and chronic sore eyes. For sale by druggists at 25 cents per box.

Try Dr. Cady's Condition Pills, they are just what a horse needs when in bad condition. Tonic, blood purifier and vermifuge. Sold by R. C. Hardwick, druggist.

Atlanta, having passed the 100,000 population stage, is anxious to take a new census.

Chamberlain's Cough Remedy cures colds, croup and whooping cough. It is pleasant, safe and reliable. For sale by R. C. Hardwick, druggist.

Boston has gone into the business of renting baby buggies for use in the public parks.

In the vicinity of Boquet, West-moland Co., Pa., almost any one can tell you how to cure a lame back or stiff neck. They dampen a piece of flannel with Chamberlain's Pain Balm and bind it on the affected parts and in one or two days the trouble has disappeared. This same treatment will promptly cure a pain in the side or chest. Mr. E. M. Fry, a prominent merchant of Boquet, speaks very highly of Pain Balm, and his recommendations have had much to do with making it popular there. For sale by R. C. Hardwick, druggist.

In France bicycles are taxed at the rate of $2.25 a year and the annual receipts are about $400,000.

Attention, Old Soldiers.

The manufacturers have instructed C. K. Wily to give a bottle of 25c. size of Foley's Colic and Diarrhoea Cure free to the first soldier of the civil war that applies for same. It is the great remedy for chronic diarrhoea, cramp colic and all bowel complaints. For sale by C. K. Wily.

ILL-FATED CHICORA.

All Hope Abandoned of Ever Finding the Lost Steamer.
St. Joseph, Mich., July 4.—President Graham, of the Graham & Morton Transportation Co., said Friday that he had abandoned all hope of ever finding the hull of the ill-fated steamer Chicora. For five weeks the tug Sanford and Payne have been employed in searching for the lost boat and Friday the attempt was given up for all time. The tug has dragged every foot of water between Stevensville and South Haven, extending the search nine miles from shore. The company has spent $10,000 in trying to discover the location of the lost boat.

THE OLD WHALES.

A Veteran Whaler Tells What He Has Seen and Done.

"There will never be as large whales in the ocean as there were 30 years ago," said Capt. Reynolds of the whaling bark, to an Omaha (Nebr.) World-Herald reporter, and while it is the proper thing for a man to affirm that "there never will be any days like the old days," yet in this case the captain had the burden of proof on his side.

"Why will there never be? Because the big ones have all been killed off and whalers will not let the young ones alone long enough to allow them to grow up. Suppose, however, the California whaler, boasts that he can make $30,000 or $40,000 in a couple of months by sending one of his ships up north. He will send it, of course.

"The days of sperm whaling are practically over. Thirty years ago it was not unusual to kill a whale which would give 300 barrels of oil, but now a 100-barrel whale is counted a large one."

"How does the whaling now compare with that it was a quarter of a century ago?"

"There are not more than one-third of the boats now that there were then. When mineral oil was discovered it took the place of sperm because it was, and still is, so much cheaper. There always will be a certain demand for the latter on account of its excellent qualities, but the demand will not be great. Still a man can make a living at sperm whaling—living but not a fortune, as he could a few years ago.

"The only money that can be made in this line now is in 'bowhead' and 'right' whales. The former are found in the ice of the arctic seas, the latter in the cold water between the ice and the warm water in which the sperm are found. These are killed for the bone, and there will be a demand for them until substitute can be found for whalebone. The government has been trying to find one for years, but never has succeeded. In the meantime the price of whalebone has gone up from twenty-five cents to six dollars a pound."

"How much bone will a whale furnish?"

"I have seen a whale that was worth $30,000, but an ordinary one will give only about 2,000 pounds. I have seen them when they gave 6,000, 7,000 pounds. Whales are growing smaller year by year and never will be as large as they formerly were unless there is a substitute for whalebone found. Sperm are increasing during the last few years.

"But the whaling business isn't what it used to be. Few men locate are being built for that purpose, and those which have been built are going to pieces at the rate of five a year. One year 33 were crushed by the ice in one fleet, and another year 13 were wrecked.

"There are a good many whales in the Russian waters, but that government will not allow us to kill them, and the Russians are the best whalers in the world, and the Scotchmen come next to him. Of course we could go up into Russian waters, but the government will not allow a whale to be killed within 15 miles of land, and it is along shore that they are found.

"Whales travel around the world. They go around the Cape Horn, stopping at feeding places such as the Falkland islands. Sperm whalers have been the best explorers the world has ever had, and they have found out more about the islands of the southern seas than any other people."

The captain followed the sea for 30 years, and many a time now his boat wonders off toward the Arctic ocean, and he wishes that he could go back among the ice floes for some exciting voyage. How many weeks he has been in it he did not say, but his description of one north of Point Barrow was enough to satisfy a common man. This occurred July 8, 1882, when he was out on a whaling expedition in the White Star. There is a reef about 50 miles out from the mainland, which makes a good landing place for boaters.

The ship had been in the snow-storm for weeks, drifting with the current, stuck in a pack of ice. The icebergs lodged on this reef were 100 feet high. The floe shut the ship in and ground it to pieces against the icebergs. The water just outside the reef was 300 feet deep.

There were 46 men on board, 6 of whom had been rescued from another wreck. They saved 40 pounds of bread each, and some extra food and started to hunt for land on foot.

"How did you feel when the ship went to pieces?" was asked of the captain.

"That was a place to test men," he replied. "Some were full of courage and as contented as if on board ship. Others wanted to lie down and die. They said: 'What is the use of dragging a load across the ice only to die in the end?' If the reef had allowed them to do as they wished, not one of us would ever

WHALE ON A CABLE.

The Insulation Damaged by the Flounder-ing of the Big Fish.

Submarine cables are usually imbedded in the silty bottom of the ocean, but at certain points they hang like wire bridges over deep submarine valleys, so that whales and other large inhabitants of the deep may become dangerous to the cable. Once in awhile it is the cable that becomes dangerous to the whales, as recently shown in an accident to the western Pacific cable. There was some trouble with the wire, and after many futile efforts the seat of the trouble was discovered 70 miles north of Santa Catharina. The repair ship Viking was sent to repair the damage, and began to take up the cable. The cable was discovered 70 miles north of Santa Catharina. The repair ship Viking was sent to repair the damage, and began to take up the cable. The cable was discovered 70 miles north of Santa Catharina. REBUKES FROM THE BENCH.

Lord Chief Justice Erie Gently Hits Down on the Counsel.

Lord Chief Justice Erie was prone to interrupt counsel when it was found that the judges had already made up their minds against him. On one occasion Mr. Burrell, Q. C., who had made a judge, was stopped with: "Here we stand, four men, and we have all firmly (emphasizing the adverb) made up our minds that there must be a trial; but if you think it worth your while going on after that (playfully), why, of course, we'll keep on hearing you." Whereupon the Q. C. laughingly sat down. On another occasion he interrupted with: "I beg to inform the counsel there is a time in the mind of every man at which he lets down the floodgates of his understanding and allows not one more drop to enter; and that time in my mind has fully arrived."

The Next French Census.

The visitors who are living in hired villas on the Riviera are all to be included in the next French census. Among those who will fill out the census papers are the queen of England, the czarowitz and her two youngest children, the grand duke and duchess of Mecklenburg-Schwerin, the duke and duchess of Parma, the duchess dowager of Coburg and Lord and Lady Salisbury. The king of the Belgians, the prince of Wales and other birds of passage in hotels or yachts will be exempted.

Bank Notes Make Good Fuel.

The novel spectacle of a steamer's furnaces being fed with bank notes was recently witnessed at a Mediterranean port. Forty sacks of the apparently valuable paper were tossed into the furnace under the long eyes of the stokers, who stood restively by with an evidently burning desire to possess themselves of at least a handful of that which they somewhat inelegantly styled "rum fuel." The notes were cancelled notes of the bank of Algiers, whose manager superintended the operation of their absolute combustion.

The Conqueror's Wife.

When Mrs. Melba was in Washington recently she met Speaker Reed in the capital. "Why don't you have a fight here?" she said to him, in laughing protest. "I would much rather see a fight than hear a speech." "Then, why didn't you let me know you were coming?" said Speaker Reed, gallantly. "I would have had a fight for your special delight, and if you will only wait I will go on the floor and start a row this minute." But Mrs. Melba couldn't wait, and the speaker's offer came to naught.

Just for the Slight of Blood.

Every bull killed in a Mexican bull fight is allowed to pore two horses if he will. The Mexicans love the sight of blood and applaud frantically when the poor horses are torn open. The horses paid for the purpose are a most miserable lot. The owner gets three dollars in Mexican money for each horse sent into the ring and $12 additional if the animal is killed. A Mexican dollar is worth about 35 cents in American money.

CASTORIA

for Infants and Children.

MOTHERS, Do You Know

that Castoria is a pure vegetable preparation, and that a list of ingredients is published with every bottle?

Do You Know that opium and morphine are stupefying narcotic poisons?

Do You Know that in most countries druggists are not permitted to sell narcotics without labeling them poisons?

Do You Know that you should not permit any medicine to be given your child unless you or your physician know of what it is composed?

Do You Know that Castoria is a pure vegetable preparation, and that a list of ingredients is published with every bottle?

Do You Know that Castoria is the prescription of the famous Dr. Samuel Picher. That it has been in use for nearly thirty years, and that more Castoria is now sold than of all other remedies for children combined?

Do You Know that the Patent Office Department of the United States, and of other countries, have issued exclusive right to Dr. Picher and his assigns to use the word "Castoria," and its formula, and that to imitate them is a state prison offense?

Do You Know that one of the reasons for granting this government protection was because Castoria had been proven to be absolutely harmless?

Do You Know that 35 average doses of Castoria are furnished for 35 cents, or one cent a dose?

Do You Know that when possessed of this perfect preparation, your children may be kept well, and that you may have unbroken rest?

Well, these things are worth knowing. They are facts.

The face-aimle signature of Dr. H. H. Picher is on every wrapper.

-TUESDAY, JULY 21, 1896-

We are authorized to announce

RON. MALCOLM YEAMAN, of Henderson county, as candidate for AFFILIATE JUDGE
in the First District, subject to the action of the Democratic party. Freehold Convention, Saturday, July 21 at 2 p.m.

We are authorized to announce

RON. J. D. CLARDY
as a candidate for re-election to Congress, subject to the action of the Democratic party.
Primary caucuses Aug. 1, County Convention
Aug. 2, District convention at Madisonville
Aug. 10.

DEMOCRATIC TICKET.

FOR PRESIDENT,
WILLIAM JENNINGS BRYAN,
OF NEBRASKA.

FOR VICE-PRESIDENT,
ARTHUR SEWALL,
OF MAINE.

DEMOCRATIC ELECTORAL TICKET.

State Jas. P. Tarrin, Kenton.
at large W. B. Smith, Madison.
First—C. F. Courty, Fulton.
Second—C. W. Bransford, Daviess.
Third—Ed B. Drake, Allen.
Fourth—Gus Brown, Breckinridge.
Fifth—Wallace McKay, Jefferson.
Sixth—Harvey Myers, Kenton.
Seventh—W. P. Kimball, Fayette.
Eighth—L. H. Carter, Anderson.
Ninth—W. G. Ramsey, Bath.
Tenth—T. J. Wells, Morgan.
Eleventh—Harry Beauchamp, Metcalfe.

Ex Gov. Wm. E. Russell, of Massachusetts, was found dead in his tent
at a fishing camp in Canada last Friday, where he had gone with a few friends for an outing. He died of heart disease in his sleep. He had been Governor of his State two or three times and though only 39 years of age was regarded as the ablest Democrat in Massachusetts. It was to him and Senator Hill that Bryan was replying when his great Convention speech was made at Chicago.
Gov. Russell was instructed for by two or three of the gold states for President, but declined to let his name be presented after the gold men decided not to vote.

In the contest in Henderson county
last year when the railroad influences were all arrayed against Frank Richardson and openly working against him, Judge Yeaman was an earnest supporter of Richardson and did all he could to help him carry Henderson county, which his friends lost by the fatal blunder of leaving too soon, after organizing the convention. Judge Yeaman at that instance took direct issue with the railroads.
But the charge that Judge Yeaman has been shown a "corporation lawyer" has been shown to be untrue. He has occasionally represented the L. & N.
in local cases but never as a salaried attorney.

The selection of Mr. J. D. Mocquet
as the successor of Mr. Chas. K.
Wheeler, by the State Central Committee, was irregular and without authority. The party law requires that vacancies in the Executive Committee must be filled by the district committees. The district committee of the First district alone has the power of electing Mr.
Wheeler's successor. It is likely that the proper committee will elect Mr.
Mocquet to the vacancy whenever it is called together, which may not be until after the September primary election.

Judge Bishop's manager in the Princeton convention in 1894 was on his feet after a deadlock of two or three days trying to lead the convention to Paducah in Bishop's interest, to defeat Grace at all hazards, when the chairman of the Henderson county delegation arose and demanded another ballot and voted his 11 votes for Grace, nominating him by a bare majority. And yet in this county some of those who should hold Judge Grace's memory dear, are running over the county begging votes for Bishop and opposing Yeaman.

...opposite district now has a Republican judge because of Judge Grace's election to the higher court in the midst of a term, and the same result would follow should Judge Bishop have to resign. The Democrat who votes for Judge Bishop does so with the certain knowledge that he will if he secures the nomination resign, a $3,000 office to the tender mercies of a Republican Governor. No Democrat has a right to indulge his greed for office at the expense of his party.
Judge Bishop should serve out his term.

Three presidential tickets are in the field, viz: Bryan and Sewall, Democratic; McKinley and Hobart, Republican; and Levering and Johnson, Prohibition. The silver party and Populists at St. Louis this week will probably endorse the Democratic ticket. The Courier-Journal suggests that gold bolters can find a bond money man to vote for in Joshua Levering, the Prohibitionist candidate, if the Democratic bolters fail to put out a ticket.

The county press of Kentucky is true blue and can be counted on to stand up for the party organization.
So far as we have seen, the only country papers that have bolted the Democratic ticket are the Russellville Herald, the Mayfield Monitor, the Shelby Sentinel and the Lexington Herald.
All of these are published in counties that went overwhelmingly for silver and not one of them represents the sentiment of the community in which it is circulated.

The State Central Committee in session at Lexington made no changes in the Democratic Committee of Christian county, except to appoint Tos. G. Childers to the vacancy caused by the resignation of Judge
T. J. Morrow in the Palmyra precinct.
Mr. Isaac Garrott is now the acting chairman of the committee.

Congressman Clardy has given his entire time last week to a canvass of Daviess county. This week he will employ his time in canvassing Henderson county. If hustling early and late will win him the nomination then he may safely be put down as a winner.—Glanzer.

The Populist Convention will meet at St. Louis to-morrow and a hard fight is expected over the proposition to endorse the Democratic ticket. One faction want to put out a separate ticket, while the other favors the concentration of all the silver forces on Bryan and Sewall.

Dr. Clardy and the Democratic ticket in the Second district this year, according to indications, will have about 6,000 majority. Daviess and Union counties will give more than half of this.—Owensboro Messenger.

The Populist State convention met in Paducah yesterday. The great question was whether or not the Democratic ticket should be endorsed at St. Louis.

Spain is preparing to send 55,000
more soldiers to Cuba to put down the rebellion that Weyler insists amounts to nothing.

A vote for Bishop is against Dr.
Clardy's interests. Keep that fact in mind.

Saturday, July 26, at 2 o'clock p.
m. Go to your precinct and vote for Yeaman.

Saturday next at 2 o'clock is the time. Vote for Yeaman.

Hon. Thos. S. Pettis, of Owensboro, has declared for Bryan.

boasted that they will carry this county, Clardy or no Clardy, now have cooling boards for themselves. If Dr. Clardy's friends are not utterly indifferent to his interests, they should go to the precinct caucuses Saturday in sufficient numbers to overwhelm these people at every voting place in the county.

CROWN JEWELS.

Something About Those Brought Back
from the Ashanti Expedition.

Some time ago Sir Francis Scott deposited at the offices of the crown agents for the colonies such of the gold and jewels belonging to King Premph as the British were able to lay hands upon and to bring to England in respect of the war indemnity due from Ashanti in connection with the recent and former expedition to Coastal.

Such rare and curious examples of barbaric skill and splendor often have a value of their own far in excess of that indicated by the weight of the precious metals of which they are composed. The whole collection, however, is far smaller than that brought home after the Ashanti war, some specimens of which are to be found at the Imperial Institute and British museum, while other articles were disposed of to dealers in curiosities, and the residue of the ornaments went to the smelting pot.

It was, said the crown agent, a notable fact that, whereas the former jewels were all of solid, heavy gold, those brought home as the result of the more recent expedition were mostly hollow and consequently much less valuable, although composed of the purest gold. The most striking feature of the collection is a crown, probably that worn by the monarch.

The body of this crown was made of antelope skin and the inner lining of coarse yellow silk, or ribbed. On each side is a large, apparently invisible, metal knob, which, when pressed, would cause the crown to expand to meet below the chin and fasten there. The ornaments upon this curious headpiece are of pure soft gold, and they comprise representations of human heads, bar-bones and lions, the whole being surmounted by two goats' horns of gold. Much of the treasure consists of component parts of necklaces, wristbands, etc., but Sir Montagu called special attention to what is presumed to be the badge of office of the public executioner at Coast. At the top and bottom of this strange ornament are representations of sections of human bodies without heads, and in the center is the executioner with his drawn sword or execution knife in his hand. All these figures are of gold, and the badge, which is of hide, is provided with strings by which it was fastened upon the breast. There is also an execution knife or sword, slightly curved, with its cutting edge on the inside. The weapon appears to have done much service. The handle, like those of most of the swords and knives in the collection, is clothed with leopard skin and terminates in a huge golden ball.—London Times.

Not a Mineral.

Most people take isinglass to be a mineral product, but such is not the case. Isinglass is prepared from the air bladders of giant sturgeons, a species of fish which inhabit the Caspian sea and its tributary rivers.
These fish average 25 feet in length and it is said to take the bladders of 17 good-sized ones to make three pounds of the glass.

A New Lifebuoy.

A German naval captain has invented a new lifebuoy. It consists of a large cork ring, capable of floating three persons, and is provided with a kind of net, which affords a support to the feet. Its principal feature, however, is that it is fitted with an electric light and a small supply of provisions.

The Blingot the People.

Washington Post: It will not do to ignore such a gigantic demonstration. It were folly to treat it as a peevish and insignificant caprice.
We have to reckon with this outburst which cannot be disposed of by a contemptuous gesture. The gold men who went to Chicago ten days ago made the mistake of assuming that they had to deal with a mere ephemeral craze, and they made the further and irrevocable mistake of dealing with it on the heroic plan.
They found, too late, that it was no fool, no lukewarm academic theory, no lifeless syllogism. They found themselves confronted by a living, palpating, thrilling movement, into which men had flung their sentiments, their convictions, their very souls.
It was a movement to be checked by nearly rounded phrases or melodious rostrum, oratory or school room discipline. It rose before them like a gigantic surge, and it overwhelmed them as a tidal wave obliterates an idle sentence scratched up on the sand. Five millions of living, breathing men in bitter deadly ornest; five million men inflamed into an ecstasy—they do not make a buckram host, to be extinguished by a sensitive and a frown.

Yeaman in Henderson county to vote

one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages.
This is Catarrh, or Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, it requires a constitutional treatment.
Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitu-

OVERAWAY HIGHWAYMAN.

Took Less Money from His Victim Than He Intended.

The "hue and cry" was frequently raised in England, during the eighteenth century, against highwaymen who infested the public roads, and made even the environs of London unsafe for well-to-do travelers. These "knights of the road" were ceremoniously respectful to the person they robbed, after their first greeting: "Your money or your life!" emphasized by a pistol, and occasionally they became champions of the distressed.

One highwayman, named Boulter, who was hanged in 1778, met a young woman weeping, as he was riding on horseback. Learning that her distress was caused by the presence of a creditor and a bailiff in a neighboring house to take her husband to prison for a debt of 30 guineas, the highwayman gave her money to pay the debt. Then when the creditor came along the road he took back the 30 guineas and rode off, much pleased with his inexpensive charity.

On another occasion on this same highwayman was "bluffed" by an imperious, rough nobleman, who was also deaf. Lord O, the nobleman, while traveling in his post-chaise, was roused from a nap by the stopping of the carriage, seeing a man on horseback, pistol in hand, the nobleman angrily asked:

"What do you want?"
"Money, my lord," answered the man.

"What money? Are you the rascal who just awoke me so suddenly?"
"Be quick, my lord! I've no time to lose; hand over your purse."

"My purse! You shall not have it! You carry on a fine trade, don't you?"

Lord O, then quietly pulled out a full purse, and with his finger and thumb deliberately took out three guineas, which he handed to the highwayman, saying: "There, that's enough for a second like you. I hope I may live to see you hanged."

The robber was so surprised by the nobleman's rough manner and contemptuous indifference that he did not insist in his demand for the purse, though he had a pistol to enforce it.

DID NOT GET A SEAT.

Woman Tried Frowning and Hypnotic Without Effect.

An early downtown Lexington avenue car recently had its seats occupied mostly by men, while a lone woman standing at the rear door bore a hopeful look, as though she expected one of them to offer her place. After going two blocks without a seat being tendered, she brought a stern frown to bear on a spectated man seated immediately in front of her, but he apparently had catlike glances on his eyes, and looked through her, without being aware of her presence.

She moved on strap forward, and, as an agreeable expression was struggling with the frown the smoke ascending from a half-extinguished cigarette in the hands of the man in front of her reached her nose, and she moved one more strap. This step brought her where a man sat reading the morning market reports.

The smile had settled on her face, but was wasted, as the reader refused to raise his eyes from the paper. Then she moved two straps. She had no sooner changed hands with the new strap and steadied herself before the new man, when the smile gave a lurch, as her free hand struck his shoulder. Her "Excuse me," accompanied with a bewitching smile, had no practical effect. She went to the next strap.

Here the jolting of the car caused her free hand to wave in the face of the new man, and, with the fixed look that seized her countenance, gave the appearance of an attempt to hypnotize him. He was not a sensitive. Even a very artificial cough that she gave had no effect on him. She stood there a minute, when her destination was reached, and she left the car with an emphasis in her walk that signified much.

His Ninth Divorce.

A special to the Cincinnati Tribune from Laporte, Ind., states that Alexander Rhimes, Indiana's much married benedict, has returned to Fulton county to prosecute a suit for his ninth divorce, he being credited with having that number of wives.

He married his first wife in 1876, since which time divorces and marriages have been almost of annual occurrence.

His career is said to be without a parallel in the Indiana courts. All of his wives are living.

First Communion Cured.

The communion cups used at the First Church of Christ, New London, are of great antiquity, none less than 100 years old and some nearly 200 years old. They date as follows: Two from the English ship Adventure in 1690, two in 1724, two in 1725, six in 1728, two in 1742, ten in 1753, six in 1818.

TYPES OF BEAUTY.

Colored Races Regard a White Skin as Positively Ugly.

How would our European types of beauty be received in other zones? White travelers have declared that in the heart of the tropical forest the negro's shining ebony skin is considered aesthetically lovely, while the white skin of the European suggests only sickness and disease. It is clear that the question of what constitutes beauty would be answered differently by every race.

To quote the apt saying of an old Greek philosopher: "Man is the measure of all things." Every race has its own Apollo and Aphrodite.

The traveler Hearne, who is thoroughly acquainted with the North American Indians, says that in the eyes of these Indians the ideal of beauty must possess "a broad flat face, small eyes, high cheek bones, low forehead, a large, broad chin, a knobby, hooked nose, a golden-brown skin." In northern China only the native Manchoo types are admired: a broad face, high cheek bones, very broad nose and enormous ears. One of these cued Asiatics who had traveled to Ceylon upon seeing the prominent nose of the foreign ambassador wrote that he had the head of a bird and the body of a man. Among the nations of Cochin China a woman to be charming must have a perfectly round head and face.

Among these colored races a white skin is regarded as ugly. White women receive little favor and attention from them. Chinese in the interior of the kingdom consider all Europeans ugly because of their white skin and prominent noses. The Siamese, with their small noses, widely separated nostrils, large mouths, rather thick lips, big faces and high, broad cheek bones, simply cannot conceive of European beauty. Their own women, they think, are so much better looking than Europeans.—Ludwig Jacobowski, in Chautauquan.

To Exchange Students.

A society to encourage the use of French universities by Scottish students and of Scotch universities by Frenchmen has been formed in Paris, by Scottish and French professors. Among them: Jules Simon, MM. Giscard, Lavisse, Berthelot, Lord Reya and Principal Donaldson. One object of the society is to reestablish in the original building the old Scots college in Paris, founded by the bishop of Moray in the fourteenth century and endowed by Archbishop Beator in the sixteenth, to be occupied by Scottish students and professors. The building is now used as a lycee, the rent for it being paid to the Scotch Catholic bishops who support theological students at St. Salpêtré with the money.

Pearls are found in all waters where oysters or mussels abound. They have been discovered in the shells of the common mussels in many rivers in the United States. The most extensive pearl fisheries, however, are those in the Red sea, in the Persian gulf and in the Indian ocean, off the island of Ceylon. The product of the Red sea and Persian gulf does not cut any considerable figure in the world's supply, which comes mainly from Ceylon and the Indian coast, where pearl diving is a regular business with thousands of men.

High prices were paid for the papers of the Brentano family recently at Frankfurt. Antonia Brentano's autograph book was sold for 6,000 marks, $1,500; 12 letters of Beethoven brought 3,900 marks, and 21 letters of Goethe 5,786 marks. The Goethe correspondence, which has not been printed, will be edited by Dr. R. Jung and published before the close of the year.

IMPERIAL GOVERNMENT.

Argument of the Advocates of This System of Administration.

However costly, directly or indirectly, an imperial system of administration may be, its advocates find a redeeming feature in the advantages to be gained through a commercial connection with colonies and protectorates. If these dependencies cannot contribute directly to the maintenance of a navy, or to the current expenses of the home government, they may at least yield to the merchants and people the profits of a commerce and of a carrying trade. The chief support of the imperial view, says Harper's Weekly, has been arguments based upon trade.

The most striking instance of commercial enterprise has been the history of Great Britain. The imports into the United Kingdom of merchandise and bullion, in a single year, are valued at $2,175,000,000. The exports are valued at $1,186,000,000. The total commercial movement of the United Kingdom in a normal year would be $3,361,000,000, or nearly double the commercial movement of the United States in its foreign trade. If we exclude the precious metals, and confine our attention to merchandise, it is found that less than one-fourth of the imports are received from British possessions, including protectorates, and a little more than one-fourth of the exports are sent to these possessions. Taking the whole empire, with an annual trade of $5,355,000,000, the United Kingdom enjoys $875,000,000 with her colonies, or about one-sixth. Assuming that the net profit on the transactions confined to the United Kingdom would be five per cent on the value of the imports and exports, a return of about $50,000,000 would represent the benefit immediately obtained from the trade of the colonies. To this must be added the freights on the carriage of goods, which would be equivalent to another ten per cent, making a total of $100,000,000.

Great Britain has secured this commercial ascendancy by a policy which to other and competing countries has always seemed ruinously liberal. The United Kingdom represents to-day the greatest of free markets, and is the distributing center for all Europe in raw materials of industry. As a distributing center its influence has waxed, for the tendency of modern commerce is more and more towards direct lines of trade, rather than through entrepot and distributing ports. The same policy would have been almost as efficacious had England been without a colonial system, provided what are now her colonies had not fallen into the possession of other European powers, all too ready to apply a system of differential duties or of monopoly trade. It has been suggested that England divide her political responsibilities, giving greater autonomy to India, and making her new African possessions a part of a great Indian empire. Such a scheme has many political points in its favor, and commercially it would not affect the dominance of English interests in the trade of the world, for England would still remain the great commission merchant for the civilized world. To this her merchant marine, her banking facilities, and her almost universal business connections have largely contributed, and will continue to contribute.

A New Find.

At Austerfield, near Bawtry, in Yorkshire, one of the two villages from which the Pilgrim Fathers came, a row of Norman arches has been discovered in perfect preservation, but built upon the wall of the village church. The church is very small, the chancel being 12 feet wide and the rest of the church 18 feet. It has a splendid Norman doorway and an ancient font, which recently was used as a drinking trough for cattle.

The dukedom, the most-elevated dignity in the British peerage, was first introduced by Edward III, who created his eldest son, the Black Prince, duke of Cornwall. This title has always been borne by the oldest son of the sovereign.

HUSHABY.

It's a hushaby, lullaby, rocky time.
When birds have all gone to sleep,
So close to your ear, my wee wee bird,
While the moonbeams long night watch doth keep.

The dear little chickens have gone to their nests

Under mamma hen's great dusty wings.

The bees have stopped humming sweet songs to the flowers—

He sings to the moon as she sails in the sky,
With the bright stars of stars in her train.

From the books in the garden the brown crickets chirp.

And the two-faced join in their refrain.

The flowers in their beds are all resting their heads.

Their honey cups filling with dew.

The bullfrogs are croaking away in the dew.

They are singing a night song to you.

So rocky, lullaby, hushaby, dear.

With your head on your mother's love's arm.

She will kiss you, and rock you, and sing you to sleep.

Then watch you and keep you from harm.

—Katherine H. Bredahl, in Home Queen.

THE CABECILLA.

BY ARTHUR A. FOLSON.

The good father was about to finish the mass when the prisoners were led before him. It was in a wild nook of the Archuleta mountains.

A crumbling rock, through which a giant fig tree forced its twisted trunk, formed a sort of improvised altar, over which was laid a Carlist standard with silver fringe. Two broken pithers were used for the holy vases, and when the mass, arose to change the gospels, one could hear the cartridges rattling in the cartridge boxes.

Higher up on the peak of the mountains the soldiers of Carlos were drawn up in solid ranks. They were kneeling with one knee upon their white caps and their muskets were slung in the shoulder belts.

The burning sun of an Easter in Navarre concentrated its blinding heat in this rocky hollow, where from time to time the flight of a blackbird disturbed the chanting of the priest and servant.

"Long live the cabecilla!" echoed through the mountains. Poor fellows! They had been so afraid of dying and the good food which they could smell cooking over the bivouac fires in the shadow of the rocks was so tempting.

"Let them be fed quickly," said the priest, with a light laugh. "The wolves have long teeth when they are about like that."

The riflemen withdrew. But one of them, the youngest, remained standing before the chief in a proud and resolute attitude, that contrasted strangely with his childish features. His capote, which was much too large for him, hung loosely upon his arm, and by its ample folds revealed his thinness and made him appear still younger. His dark, brilliant, Arab eyes burned with a feverish light, and their penetrating gaze annoyed the cabecilla, who demanded:

"What do you want?"

"Nothing. I wait for you to decide my fate."

"But your fate shall be the same as that of the others. I made no exception. The pardon extended to all."

"The others are traitors and cowards. I only remained silent."

The priest trembled and looked the lad steadily in the face.

"What is your name?"

"Fronio Vidal."

"Of what place are you?"

"Puyecorda."

"How old are you?"

"Seventeen years."

"The republic is so short of men that it is obliged to draft boys?"

"I was not drafted, padre, I enlisted."

"You know, foolish lad, that I have more than one means to make you shout 'Long live the king!'"

The boy, with a superb gesture, replied:

"I defy you!"

"You are rather die?"

"A hundred times!"

"Very well, then, you shall die."

The cure made a sign, and a platoon of soldiers marched forward and formed about the boy, who courageously retained his composure. The chief was impressed by his fortitude and asked:

"Do you desire anything first? Would you like something to eat or drink?"

"No," replied the boy, "but I am a good Catholic, and I would not like to appear before God without confessing."

The priest had not yet removed his capote and, standing about for his said, as he seated himself upon a rock, and when the soldiers had withdrawn the lad began in a low voice:

"Bless me, father, for I have sinned."

But in the midst of the confession a terrible fusillade burst forth at the entry of the defile.

"To arms!" cried the sentinels.

The priest, having just issued his orders and posted his soldiers. He had seized a revolver with intention to stop to remove his surplice, when upon turning about he perceived the boy still upon his knees.

"What are you doing there?"

"I am waiting for the absolution."

"True," said the priest, "I had forgotten it."

Gravely he raised his hand and blessed the young head bowed before him. Soon the firing about for his men who were dispersed in the disorder of the attack, he drew back a step, and taking aim full in the face of his penitent, he shot him dead upon the spot.—Translated from the French of Alphonse Daudet, in Boston Budget.

Drive Bulls Four in Hand.

Pomona, a section of Germantown, was once the home of Col. Forrest, who purchased the tract of land from a family named Shoemaker more than a century ago. Forrest was a colonel in the revolutionary army, and took part in the battle of Germantown. He was always doing something out of the usual custom, according to the accounts given of him by old residents of that suburb. It is said that he sometimes would drive a four-in-hand team of bulls from Germantown to Philadelphia. Forrest sold Pomona to James Duval, a French merchant, about the time of the war of 1812. Duval took considerable pride in raising fruit and ornamental trees of all kinds, and Pomona was the attraction for many distinguished people who came to Philadelphia—Philadelphia Record.

The Passion Flower.

The passion flower is emblematic of death. In the various parts of this remarkable blossom there may be found fancied resemblances to the articles mentioned in the account of the crucifixion. The cross, the hammer, the nails, the crown of thorns, the spear and the drops of blood are all depicted by the eye of superstition.

Republicans of Minnesota Meet and in dorse William J. Bryan.

Minneapolis, Minn., July 17.—The exposition building was filled last night with an audience larger than it has held since the national Republican convention in 1892. The occasion was a ratification meeting, held under the auspices of the Republican Bimetallic League of Minnesota, and the conclusion of the State convention held last night, at which delegates were present from every county in the State. Addresses were made by Congressman Charles A. Towne, of Duluth, ex-Congressman John Lind, State Senator Jay Smith, the Hon. Frank M. Nye and several others. The convention in the afternoon elected thirty delegates and thirty alternates to the silver convention at St. Louis. Bryan was unanimously endorsed by the convention, which pledged the support of all bimetallic Republicans in the State to the Democratic nominee.

HOPKINSVILLE MARKET.

Hopkinsville, July 16.—The offerings this week were unchanged in point of quality, being similar to those of several weeks past. Our market was higher on lugs and the better grades, fully 1/2 to 3/4c. The warehouses report the cleanest sale for the year, as the planters have made up their minds to accept the prices, hence the rejections were very small. The demand was better this week on common leaf and common lugs. Weather conditions have been very unfavorable for the growing crop, as there have been excessive rains nearly all the week, and in certain localities the watersports did a good deal of damage by flooding and washing up much tobacco. It begins to look like we are to have a good deal of very poor nondescript tobacco in the '97 growing crop; while it is a little early to tell just yet, it points that way from the best information we can get from the surrounding country. At any rate we are not assured of a good crop yet.

A Democratic Newspaper.

The Louisville Democrat, a morning daily, which will give hearty support to the nominees of the Chicago Convention, will be started on August 15th. It will be a true-blue Democratic newspaper and will give the Democrats of the State an honest paper journal.

It will have the advantage of its contemporaries in having the admirable United Press service, the same quantity and quality which is used by the New York Sun and other metropolitan papers.

Daniel E. O'Sullivan of The Critic will be its Editor-in-chief. Further details of the enterprise will be given within the next four weeks.—Critic.

Stevenson to Support the Ticket.

Bowling Green, Ky., July 14.—Vice President Stevenson and wife arrived in the city this morning from Bloomington, Ill., and are the guests of their daughter, Mrs. Hardin. The vice-president said tonight: "I will support the nominees of the Chicago convention, but as to the outlook I am not well enough posted at present to give an opinion."

DEATHS.

JENKINS.—Mr. Wm. Jenkins, a well known farmer of the Roaring Springs neighborhood, died at his home of consumption Saturday night, aged 65 years.

CALDWELL.—Mrs. C. M. Caldwell died at her home in this city yesterday morning of enlargement of the liver, aged about 75 years. The funeral services will be conducted by Dr. W. L. Nourse this morning and the interment will take place in Hopewell Cemetery.

ALLEN.—Mrs. Allen, a piece of Mr. C. W. Vaughan, of Berndon, died of consumption Friday, after a long illness.

Help the Orphans.

A meeting to organize a local society of the Children's Home Society was held in the parlors of the Phoenix Hotel last Thursday night.

Rev. F. M. Elliott, State Superintendent, called the meeting to order and gave an outline of the work that is being carried out in different States.

During his remarks he stated that on that day he had received by mail twelve applications from responsible parties to furnish homes for children.

He said that this was more applications by far than he had ever before received in one day. On the same day three requests were made to him to furnish homes.

Mr. Elliott was greatly encouraged during his visit here. Many of our people pledged themselves for or in the benevolent work, and the outlook is altogether very promising.

The local Advisory Board had been made up before the meeting was called. The following gentlemen comprise the board.

Clarence Anderson, President.

G. H. Johnson, Vice President.

Allen M. Walts, Secretary.

Dr. Eager and Dr. Stites Medical Advisers.

John Young, W. P. Winfree, E. B. Forrey, Nat Gaither, E. B. Bassett, Jno. D. Hill, Dr. A. E. Bentley.

Parties who pledge themselves in any amount are requested to hand same to Mr. Geo. D. Dalton, Treasurer.

The people of the city and county are urged to contribute for this benevolent work. It is non-sectarian and the Society's only aim is to find homes for the children who are unprotected for. Little babies and children up to fourteen years of age will come under the care of the State Society.

The children in their homes will give them all the advantage of education and care until they attain their majority.

Let every person who is able come forward and assist in this grand work.

The meetings of the local board will be held bi-monthly. The next meeting will be held at Anderson's gallery on Thursday evening, August 6, at 8 o'clock.

Any information desired will be furnished by the president.

Two Splendid Rides.

Prof. J. W. Bingham, of Union City, Tenn., called at the headquarters yesterday. He stated that he owned both the Jeff Davis and Lincoln cabinets. The latter is located in Larue county, Ky., and the former in Todd county, Ky. He wishes to confer with the management in reference to bringing them here for exhibition at the Tennessee Centennial. He says they are in good condition to bring here for this purpose, should the management so direct. Director General Lewis is out of the city, but the matter will receive prompt attention.

The exhibition of these two cabinets, containing relics of the great men who were born therein, would add a taking feature to the great Exposition.—Nashville American.
